The business owner with idle surplus

Vikram, 44: the story, the conversation, and the numbers to show

In short: Vikram's surplus sits in a savings account and arbitrage funds. For the part he will not need for 2 years, a hybrid SIF returned 7.51% against 6.04% for arbitrage over 12 months.

Vikram, 44

Runs a trading firm · 30% tax slab · illustrative story

Vikram runs a trading firm. Cash comes in waves, so he parks it in arbitrage funds that he can pull out in a day. ₹40 lakh sits there; ₹15 lakh of it has not moved in two years.

"Arbitrage is boring. Is boring the best I can do for money I don't need?"

The conversation

PARTNER
Which part of the ₹40 lakh have you not touched in 2 years?

CLIENT
About ₹15 lakh. The rest moves with the season.

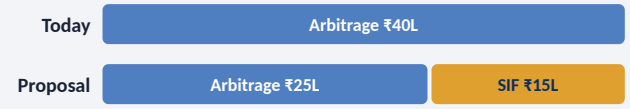

PARTNER
Keep ₹25 lakh in arbitrage. Put ₹15 lakh in a hybrid SIF, which pays out on set days.

CLIENT
What did it make?

PARTNER
₹10 lakh became ₹10,75,100 in a year; arbitrage ₹10,60,400. It had 4 small losing months; arbitrage none.

Before and after

₹ lakh

Why a SIF may fit

- Splits his money by when he needs it: arbitrage for the next year, SIF for later
- Arbitrage-like core with some equity and shorts for more return
- Same KYC and AssetPlus account as his mutual funds

Numbers to show

% return; after tax for a 30% slab investor

	Last 12 months	After tax (30% slab)	March 2026 (Nifty −11.3%)
Arbitrage funds	6.04%	4.83%	0.53%
Hybrid SIF, middle fund	7.51%	6.01% or 5.26%	−1.92%

Objections you will hear

They say	You can say
"I may need the money suddenly."	Keep that part in arbitrage. Hybrid SIFs pay out only on set days, so move only money with no near-term use.
"Arbitrage never falls."	True in the last 12 months. The SIF aims for more and had small losing months; it is a different job.
"My CA prefers FDs."	Share the after-tax table: FD interest is taxed every year; a SIF is taxed when sold.

Not suitable if

- All the money is working capital
- Needs daily liquidity on all of it
- Uncomfortable with any monthly fall
