SIF DECODER

Specialized Investment Funds

November 2026

For Private Circulation Only

What are SIFs?

SIFs are positioned between Mutual Funds and PMS/AIFs, with the flexibility to use derivative- based strategies within a defined regulatory framework.

THE STRUCTURE

01 SEBI-Regulated Category

New investment category introduced by SEBI

02 ₹10 Lakh Minimum

Minimum investment per investor:
Rs 10 Lakhs per AMC across all their SIF Strategies.

03 Access to Sophisticated Strategies

Long-short strategies were earlier available only to AIF investors at min ₹1 Cr ticket. SIF offers similar flexibility with better tax-efficiency.

THE DERIVATIVE FLEXIBILITY

04 Up to 25% in Unhedged Short Derivatives

Unlike MFs, SIFs can deploy up to 25% in unhedged short derivatives, giving fund managers more flexibility across market cycles.

05 No Leverage through Derivatives

Derivatives cannot be used to take leverage; primarily used for volatility management and income enhancement, with gross exposure capped at 100%.

06 Potential for Better Risk-Adjusted Returns

Flexibility to use derivatives can help target potentially better risk-adjusted returns than MFs.

What is our coverage stance on SIFs?

COVERAGE STANCE

HYBRID SIFs

ACTIVE COVERAGE

EQUITY SIFs

SELECTIVE COVERAGE

Why?

HYBRID SIF

- Tax-efficient solution to generate fixed income+ returns with slightly higher volatility; most strategies qualify for 12.5% taxation after a 1-year holding period.
- Hybrid MFs are primarily distinguished by their asset allocation, while Hybrid SIF strategies have an additional layer of differentiation through derivative usage, allowing strategies within the same category to deliver meaningfully different risk-return profiles.
- Derivative Strategies like Covered Calls, Collars, Special Situations, Straddles/Strangles, etc are typically not available or restricted in MFs

EQUITY SIF

- We currently cover Ex-Top 100 strategies, which fill the gap left by MFs having no combined mid & small cap category. Within these, we prefer quasi-PMS-like strategies that deliver PMS-style portfolios with MF-like taxation.
- Four factors work in favour of such strategies: Concentration in high-conviction ideas, a smaller fund size that keeps them nimble in mid, small and micro caps, a fund management team with a proven track record, and the flexibility of a wider mandate than traditional MFs.
- Despite their promise, most Long-Short Equity AIFs, both in India and globally, have struggled to establish a compelling track record of performance across market cycles. Hence, we currently prefer predominantly long-only strategies with limited short or hedging exposure, while monitoring how SIF long-short strategies evolve.

Key Considerations

- SIF is a new category, and its role in investor portfolios is still evolving.
- SIFs can differ considerably in risk/return even within the same category; strategy-level due diligence is a prerequisite and not optional
- A strategy may look well-structured in design, but investors should ideally consider meaningful allocation only after its execution capability is validated through live performance

What is our SIF Evaluation Framework?

An established AMC or Fund Management Team with a credible track record in managing similar strategies.

Clearly articulated strategy + well-defined risk-return framework. Mandates with excessive flexibility with no defined allocation strategy are potential indicators of style drift or market timing risks.

Regular and transparent communication on long-book stock selection, gross and net market exposure, and derivative strategies enables informed evaluation of portfolio's performance attribution

Demonstrated performance record (vs back tests) validates a strategy's real world performance and drawdown management across market cycles
